COMPANY NOTE · 8 NOV 2026

JPMorgan Chase & Co. (JPM)

Hold: base case $350.58 by Nov 2027, 4.8% above today's price, with very high uncertainty

JPM scores in the 57th percentile of its 41-company peer group. The price is $334.49 against an estimated value of $310.88, and the 12-month range runs from $255.93 to $480.21.

KEY POINTS

1. The business. JPMorgan Chase reports its results in Consumer & Community Banking, Commercial & Investment Bank and Asset & Wealth Management, with remaining activities in Corporate.[1]
2. Risks. JPMorgan says extensive regulation significantly shapes how it does business, and regulators could adopt new interpretations of law that require it to show prior conduct complied.[2,3]
3. Recent results. Markets revenue rose in the quarter on a very strong Equity Markets result, particularly in Prime and Derivatives, while Fixed Income Markets revenue declined on weaker Commodities, Rates and Credit.[4,5,6,7]
4. News and views. Coverage of the third-quarter report was mixed: one article noted that JPMorgan posted a rare miss against estimates, while Goldman Sachs beat on revenue and earnings per share on strong equities trading.[8]
5. Industry trends. JPMorgan reports that lower average interest rates reduced its cost of funds for loans and Markets activities, but the funding transfer pricing benefit on deposits fell by more than the rates paid to depositors, compressing deposit margins.[9]
6. What to watch. Regulators could adopt new interpretations of law or supervisory expectations and require the Firm to show that prior conduct complies, which raises the risk of penalties or enforcement actions.[10,11]
